

We accomplished virtually everything we aimed to with this milestone. We successfully obtained API keys for the Ticketmaster interfacing and were able to integrate it so that it displayed concert data related to the artists that it previously stored from Spotify. We are still in the process of figuring out how to get the location radius to work seamlessly with the Ticketmaster concert information and are having slight issues with the images gathered from Ticketmaster caching correctly and thus not displaying after switching tabs. We are still working on solving these issues, and they should be completed in a timely manner, ensuring we do not fall behind on our desired level of progress.